Dr. Priscilla Dass-Brailsford

Priscilla Dass-Brailsford, a native of South Africa, is a graduate of Harvard University and on faculty in the Division of Counseling and Psychology at Lesley University. Prior to teaching, she coordinated a statewide Community Crisis Response team for the Victims of Violence program at Cambridge Health Alliance, Harvard Medical School that responded to affected communities in the aftermath of violence and trauma. She has worked extensively with trauma victims in the inner city of Boston and conducted court ordered sexual abuse evaluations.

Dr. Dass-Brailsford has several ongoing research projects on ethnocultural violence, the effects of community violence on adolescents and secondary trauma among helping professionals who have experienced stress and dislocation after Hurricane Katrina. Her first book, “A Practical Approach to Trauma: Empowering Interventions” was published by Sage Publications in early 2007. A second book entitled “Disaster and Crisis Response: Lessons Learned from Hurricane Katrina,” based on her work in New Orleans, is in press. Dr. Dass-Brailsford has presented both nationally and internationally. She is currently a visiting professor at the Center for Trauma at Georgetown University, School of Medicine in Washington, D.C.

This conference is designed for individuals who have basic knowledge of trauma and are responsible for overseeing, designing and/or providing services to students, clients, and communities impacted by trauma, including school counselors, educators, human service professionals, health care providers, and first responders.

Providing Cultural Competent Care in the Aftermath of Violence and Psychological Trauma

In the aftermath of trauma or violence, both individuals and communities can be empowered and guided to resiliency through culturally appropriate interventions. Participants can expect to develop skills in trauma therapy, crisis and safety planning, and self-care strategies.

Through lecturettes, small and large group exercises, case studies and other methods, participants will:

- 1) understand the impact of trauma on individuals and groups.
- 2) learn how an awareness of cultural expectations, community resources and other ecological factors can support recovery.
- 3) explore innovative, culturally appropriate models for effective trauma treatment and crisis interventions.
- 4) design and tailor interventions that enhance individual and community resiliency.
- 5) develop an awareness of the secondary consequences of trauma on caregivers and learn coping strategies that help in the prevention of compassion fatigue.
