

Nonprofit Community Convening

Leaving a Legacy: Done Right

Join us for coffee and stimulating conversation facilitated by Tim Davis of Eastern Illinois University and Amy Card of Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center.

Planning for the future of nonprofit organizations is vitally important both for the organization itself and for the people those organizations will serve in the future. When someone makes a planned gift, they send a message or more importantly -- leave their legacy -- as someone who cares about their community and the generations to come who will call it home. There are numerous types of planned gifts, some which can benefit the donor while he or she is still alive. We will briefly discuss types of planned gifts and their benefits, as well as providing trends. The interactive discussions that follow will help attendees discover what it means to charitable organizations.

Refreshments will be provided and teams of staff and board are encouraged to attend.
