

Mrs. Kiran Padmaraju is currently an Assistant Professor in the Department of Early Childhood, Elementary and Middle Level Education. She is also in the process of collecting data towards completion of her Ph.D. degree at Indiana State University. Before coming to the U.S. in 2001, she taught in a private school in Hyderabad, India for fourteen years. In India, she received two bachelor's degrees – in commerce and in education. She also holds a postgraduate degree in English Literature from Osmania University in India and received her second Master's degree in Elementary Education here at Eastern. Her research interests include teacher education, minority faculty, and use of technology in K-16 classrooms.

She is married to Lakshmikara R. Padmaraju, who also works in the Business Office at Eastern and they have two children, Mukta and Kashyap.