Dr. Weihsin Gui is an assistant professor of English at Eastern Illinois University. He is currently working on a book manuscript entitled Residual Nations: Postcolonial Literatures in a Global Moment. He is also beginning a second project on literary realism, ethnography, and transnational and global novels. Additionally, he is editing two collections: a special issue of the journal Diaspora on the topic of diaspora and form in contemporary literatures, as well as a critical anthology on the work of Singaporean poet and painter Arthur Yap. He teaches contemporary British and anglophone postcolonial literatures at Eastern Illinois University. Dr. Gui's articles have appeared or are forthcoming in The Quarterly Literary Review Singapore, The Journal of Postcolonial Writing, and Diaspora: A Journal of Transnational Studies.
