

Inside the PSA

Vol. 02

Issue. 01

Why Study Political Science?

OCT 23, 2008

For those of us who study political science we know that it cannot simply be defined as the study of government. Political science helps us analyze those intricacies in our political system and in others. We can analyse polls to determine where a candidate needs to focus more attention, or whether proposed legislation would be popular. We can compare countries and laws to answer questions regarding the effectiveness of certain governmental systems or legislato. We can theorize what the role of government actually is. Essentially, political science allows us to study and understand the thing that governs us. Studying political science helps one to become aware and to truly be active citizens within our governmental system. Studying political science offers a broad range of options for specialization which include but are not limited to enviro.mental issues, political theory, comparative

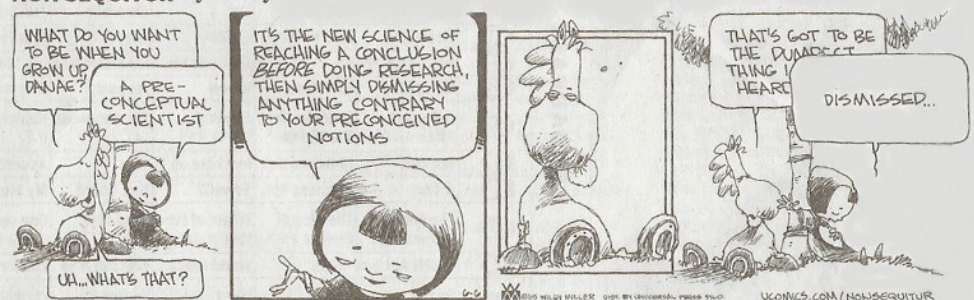

PSA Meetings
Thursdays
5pm
Rm 3752
Be Involved!!

A small biography of the man behind PSA

Nate Polak is a Senior Political Science major concentrating in International Studies. Nate hopes to attend Graduate school and further his education in Comparative politics so that he may one day get an analyst job for the government. His most recent accomplishment is being accepted to present a paper at the IPSA conference and he also recently participated in a student supreme court panel. Nate is dedicated to PSA and hopes that it is one day a well known RSO on Eastern's Campus.

NON SEQUITUR by Wiley

Upcoming PSA Events

A look at some of the upcoming activities sponsored by the PSA

Student Panel:

Coming in Soon the Political Science Association will be hosting a student panel addressing the issues that are guiding this years elections. Students involved will come from several different majors including but not limited to Political Science, History, and Journalism.

Election Night Party!!

Don't want to watch the excitement of the election alone? Well come join members of the PSA on election night for pizza and drinks as we watch the results unfold.

Look out for more Information