Rationale, Justifications, and Assurances (Part I)

1. ____ Course is required for the major(s) of ____ ____ Course is required for the minor(s) of ____ ____ Course is required for the certificate program(s) of ____ x Course is used as an elective

2. Rationale for proposal : This course serves as a comprehensive yet accessible introduction to the study of Theatre Arts and is designed to serve as a general education course, appealing to a broad undergraduate audience from all disciplines. Revisions to the existing course address the new learning goals and will allow for online delivery of the course.

3. Justifications for (answer N/A if not applicable)

Similarity to other courses: N/A

Prerequisites: N/A

Co-requisites: N/A

Enrollment restrictions: N/A

Writing active, intensive, centered: The course satisfies the criteria for “writing intensive” in that the course includes frequent writing assignments as students react to or interpret concepts and information presented in the class. Students will attend department productions and will write short (usually 2-3 page) responses that comment upon how the theatrical techniques and concepts studied in class are reflected in the live productions. In addition, students will write short opinion essays based on the coursework as well as a formal research essay that will be revised by the student after receiving instructor feedback. Therefore, at least 35% of students’ grades in this course will be derived from written assignments.

4. General education assurances (answer N/A if not applicable)

General education component: This course fits the Fine Arts General Education component. The course and its objectives address four of the EIU Learning Goals: Critical Thinking, Writing and Critical Reading, Speaking and Listening, and Responsible Citizenship.

Curriculum: All of class time and all activities “relate to the skills in the learning goals or sub-goals” cited.

Instruction: All of class time and all activities “directly deliver instruction to help students learn the skills of the goals or sub-goals” cited.

Assessment: All modes of evaluation “directly assess if students can do the skills” cited, and this assessment wholly factors into a student’s grade for the course.

5. Online or hybrid delivery justification: The online-delivery of this course will allow students more flexibility in their scheduling, accommodating those individuals who work full time or who have other constraints on their time and thereby improving overall recruitment and retention. This can be done through online-delivery without sacrificing the overall integrity of the course or its content. The electronic version of THA 2190G is designed to utilize EIU's online course delivery system.

Instruction: Each week's goals will align with the student learning objectives for the course. Methods include brief lectures augmented with presentation software, reading assignments, relevant video material through Kaltura, and discussion prompts to facilitate synchronous and/or asynchronous class engagement and response. All instructors of online sections will have passed EIU's Online Course Development Institute (or other documented and equivalent training method) by time of course offering.

Integrity: Integrity in the online sections will be assured in three stages. First, the electronic syllabus will include a clear statement on academic integrity and plagiarism and the consequences of breaking this policy. Students will have to agree to this policy in their first online quiz. Second, all written assignments will be subject to evaluation by an electronic plagiarism software and all cases of plagiarism will be reported. Finally, the instructor will have developed a feel for the writing style of the students through their discussion board postings which can be used as a point of comparison to their written assignments for the class. Students will be provided with rubrics for all written assignments so expectations of the instructor are clearly communicated. As for the quizzes and exams, these will be given open book but all will be timed, encouraging the students to complete the assigned readings in advance. In addition, the answers will be randomized making it difficult for the student to work together.

Interaction: Professor-student and student-student interaction will notably include web-based discussions via the online course delivery system. Discussion prompts will encourage students to read and respond. These responses, with input from the professor, will also help the students comprehend the material and create an effective learning community.

4. Course materials. Felner, Think Theatre, most current edition
Gainor, Garner, and Puchner, The Norton Anthology of Drama, Shorter Edition, most current publication
Attendance at University Theatre Productions
5. Weekly outline of content.

WEEK 1: WHAT IS THEATRE?

Students will begin to define theatre as an artform, separate from other ideas of performance. Discussions of “liveness,” collaboration, ephemerality, and other theatrical conventions will be emphasized.

WEEKS 2 and 3: WHAT IS A PLAY? and READING PLAYS

Students will learn the basics of dramatic structure and terminology including story, plot, rising action, climax, exposition, point of attack, and character. Students will apply these concepts to the reading of plays.

WEEKS 4 and 5: THEATRE SPACES and HISTORY

Students will learn differences between various theatre spaces (proscenium, arena, thrust, environmental, etc.) New theatre terminology regarding the space will be introduced. If possible, students will tour theatre facilities. Students will also be introduced to the rich history of global theatre practice.

WEEK 6: ACTING

Students will explore the work of the actor including both presentational and representational approaches to performance. Students will explore the relationship between improvisation and acting and will examine various conventions of the performance throughout history as well as the training modern actors engage in.

WEEK 7: DIRECTING

Students will explore the history of the director and its role in the creation of performance. Students will examine how the art of directing is tied to interpretative and analytic skills and will learn the basic nature of blocking and creating dynamic stage pictures.

WEEK 8: MIDTERM.

Students will be tested over material presented up to this point in their coursework.

WEEK 9, 10, and 11. THEATRICAL DESIGN

Students will examine each of the theatre designers' roles (lighting, costume, sound, and set) in depth and will explore the analytic, interpretive, and creative process of the designer.

WEEK 12: ALTERNATIVE PERFORMANCE STYLES

Students will examine alternative forms of performance including non-western theatre practice, solo performance, docudrama, musical/opera, etc.

WEEK 13: THE THEATRICAL LANDSCAPE

Students will be introduced to the structure of the professional theatre (both commercial and not-for-profit) and the various theatrical roles not covered earlier in the semester (producer, dramaturg, stage manager, dressers, etc.)

WEEKS 14 and 15: GROUP WORK AND INSTRUCTOR MEETINGS

Students will continue to develop and original project based on their coursework, working as actors, directors, and designers in performing/designing a scene "from page to stage."

WEEK 16: FINAL PROJECTS and EXAM.

Students will present their work to the class and take a final exam on course material from the midterm on.

6. Assignments and evaluation, including weights for final course grade.

Participation 10%

2 Performance Critiques 20% (10% each)

2 Opinion Essays 20% (10% each)
