Natural Disasters

Welcome to the 6th issue of the Central Illinois Teaching with Primary Sources Newsletter, a collaborative project between the An Adventure of the American Mind / Teaching with Primary Sources Programs at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville and Eastern Illinois University.

Natural Disasters is the focus of the March 2007 issue. The Spotlight on Central Illinois looks at the flood devastation along the Mississippi and Illinois rivers.

The Topic Collections provide primary sources on natural disasters from images to film. We have designated an area with lesson plans and activities to use in your classroom. Each lesson plan indicates the grade level it was created for. Teachers know the ability level of their students, so you may choose a part of a lesson or to elaborate as you see fit.

We want to hear from you! Please share your comments and ideas!

Spotlight on Central Illinois

It has always been said if you don't like Illinois weather wait ten minutes and it will change. That has certainly been the case lately. Going from a mild December to wild winds, snow and ice enough to actually close school it has been a true Illinois winter. The Library of Congress American Memory shows just some of the natural disasters that have happened around Central Illinois.

These are just two examples of natural disasters that hit Illinois. Below you can find out about other natural disasters that happened across America.

Located along the Mississippi River, Quincy Illinois has seen it's share of natural disasters in the form of floods. There are many pictures of the devastation in American Memory collections. Most of the photographs are from the floods from 1927-1929. The only flood in this area that has been more devastating is the flood of the Mississippi River in 1993.

Peoria Illinois located on the Illinois River has also experienced flooding disasters. American Memory has photographs of Peoria flood damage in the Photographs from the Chicago Daily News Collection. The flood of 1927 which most of the photographs are from, started in late August and continued through October.

Tending the Commons <http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/collections/tending/index.html>

Tending the Commons: Folklife and Landscape in Southern West Virginia is based on the American Folklife Center's Coal River Folklife Project (1992-99).

The project documents traditional uses of the mountains in Southern West Virginia's Big Coal River Valley. Functioning as a de facto commons, the mountains have supported a way of life that for many generations has entailed hunting, gathering, and subsistence gardening, as well as coal mining and timbering. This collection contains audio as well as photos of floods, drought and mine blowouts. An example of one audio portion is an interview with Howard Miller <http://memory.loc.gov/afc/afccmns/11/119003.mp3> who was 14 when the flood of 1932 hit his hometown. You and your students can listen to his experiences of trying to escape this natural disaster.

The South Texas Borderer 1900-1920

<http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/award97/txuhtml/runyhome.html>

The Robert Runyon Photograph Collection of the South Texas Border Area, a collection of 8,241 items, is a unique visual resource documenting the Lower Rio Grande Valley during the early 1900s. It includes photographs from the floods of the Rio Grande, which flooded in 1916 to 1918. The collection includes glass negatives, lantern slides, nitrate negatives, prints, and postcards, representing the life's work of commercial photographer Robert Runyon (1881-1968), a longtime resident of South Texas. His photographs document the history and development of South Texas and the border, including the Mexican Revolution, the U.S. military presence at Ft. Brown and along the border prior to and during World War I, and the growth and development of the Rio Grande Valley.

San Francisco and the 1906 Earthquake

<http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/papr/sfhome.html>

This collection consists of twenty-six films of San Francisco from before and after the Great Earthquake and Fire, 1897-1916. Seventeen of the films depict San Francisco and its environs before the 1906 disaster. Seven films describe the great earthquake and fire. The two later films include a 1915 travelogue that shows scenes of the rebuilt city and a tour of the Panama Pacific Exposition and a 1916 propaganda film.

Prairie Settlement Nebraska Photographs and Family Letters

<http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/award98/nbhtml/pshome.html>

For nearly forty years the photographs of Solomon D. Butcher and the letters of Uriah W. Oblinger and his family have been used to tell the story of settlement on the Great Plains in the latter part of the nineteenth century. Butcher's images visually document the settlers, their homesteads, and worldly goods in the harsh environment of the Nebraska Sand Hills. The letters and photographs tell of the great challenges these settlers faced with mother nature. The Oblinger collection gives a voice to Butcher's photographs, in letters that not only express the hopes and fears of many homesteaders, but also offer candid descriptions of daily life on the prairie.

COLLECTION: Early Motion Pictures 1897-1920

SUMMARY: From Edison films catalog: While our photographers were crossing the Atlantic Ocean a most wonderful and sensational picture was secured, showing a storm at sea. The picture was secured by lashing the camera to the after bridge of the Kaiserine Maria Theresa [sic], of the North German Lloyd Line, during one of its roughest voyages. The most wonderful storm picture ever photographed. Taken at great risk. 100 feet. 15.00.

Westward by Sea <http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/award99/mymhihtml/mymhi-home.html>

This online collection presents pictorial and textual materials that illustrate major themes in the history of maritime westward expansion. These themes include, but are not limited to, the California Gold Rush, the roles of women, the immigrant experience, whaling life, life at sea, shipping and native populations. The collection focuses mainly on primary sources such as ships' logbooks and secondary sources, including nineteenth-century published narratives of voyages and travels. A number of photographs, paintings, maps, and nautical charts have been selected to illustrate more vividly the story of Americans' western seaborne travel. This collection also includes a poem about being at sea.

America from the Great Depression to WWII

<http://memory.loc.gov/ammem/fsowhome.html>

The images in the Farm Security Administration - Office of War Information Collection are among the most famous documentary photographs ever produced. Created by a group of U.S. government photographers, the images show Americans in every part of the nation. In the early years, the project emphasized rural life and the negative impact of the Great Depression, farm mechanization, and the Dust Bowl. In later years, the photographers turned their attention to the mobilization effort for World War II. There are many images in this collection that show the hardships people faced during dust storms and droughts.

What's New at LOC.GOV?

The Library of Congress unveiled a new webportal page "African American History Resource" <http://www.loc.gov/africanamericans/>. This special portal is the theme for 2007 "From Slavery to Freedom: Africans in the Americas." This site contains news and events pertaining to Black History Month that took place at the Library of Congress. It also contains collections, audio, video and images, there is also a section just for teachers with lesson plans and primary sources for use in the classroom.

User Tip

Need a time saver tip on searching the Library of Congress (LOC) website? Use the Collection Connection found within "The Learning Page" sub site, <http://memory.loc.gov/learn/> . Collection Connections provide primary source sets, links to pages throughout the LOC website on the chosen topic/theme, lessons, activity ideas and keywords for using the collections to develop critical thinking skills. How do I get there? From the main Library of Congress website (www.loc.gov) , click on Teachers in the left hand column. Then click on the link collection connections .
