

A public relations officer is a great communicator, can be relatively persuasive, a people person, and determined, at least in my opinion and that is all a part of who I am. I thrive to do my best in whatever I do. Anything involving social media, and emails I will excel in, not to mention I am a psychology major and business administration minor so I will know how to strategize and attract individuals to attend our events. Interacting with people is one thing I enjoy doing because you meet people with so many different stories, cultures, and lifestyle. Therefore, even if I must walk around campus to hand out or put-up flyers, I would not mind because that way you can connect with individuals and it's not just a post or email being sent. Also, that way we can gain knowledge about what type of activities students are interested in.
