

December 4, 1913.

Mr. Eli Brown,
Brecton, Illinois.

My dear Sir:

I regret to tell you that the general attitude of your son Guy toward his school work is such that he is dropped from school. During his stay here he has frequently been exhorted and urged to do better work, but for no great length of time have we had anything approximating honest effort from him to perform his school duties.

I beg to assure you that the dropping of your son and the writing of this letter is a very unpleasant duty.

Yours very truly,
