At the April 19, 2013 board meeting, CARLI was approved for a not to exceed amount of $300,000.00. The University actually anticipates spending an additional $60,000.00 to cover costs for the year.

This consortium gives faculty and students access to more than 36 million bibliographies and electronic items from 80 libraries across the state.

G. New Degree Programs

1.) Adult and Community Education Undergraduate Degree Proposal

Background and Rational

The undergraduate degree program in Adult and Community Education will equip students with the knowledge and skills needed to provide educational and leadership services in a variety of nonprofit, community, and government agencies and settings. The program will serve undergraduates who are motivated to provide educational services to enable adult learners to pursue their goals for personal and professional growth. Increasing demands and opportunities for lifelong learning in both workplace and community settings will require skilled educators and leaders specifically trained to provide appropriate services. We are projecting an enrollment of 20 to 25 students per year.

This program integrates adult learning principles, curriculum development, instructional delivery, technology use, assessment of learning, organizational leadership, and organizational development and evaluation. Three significant, required fieldwork components (one junior-level and two capstone senior-level courses) will provide practical, integrative application experiences for all students. An established university minor or a preapproved coherent set of courses substantially equivalent to a minor is required to ensure acquisition of fundamental content knowledge and skills.

This program enables the College of Education and Professional Studies (CEPS), in partnership with nonprofit, community, and government agencies, to extend its existing expertise in teaching and learning into a previously-untapped domain of application beyond P-12 education, where the College and University have a longstanding reputation for excellence.

Program Mission

The mission of this program is to prepare graduates to have the knowledge and skills to develop, deliver and lead educational programs in adult education settings, community agencies, and not-for-profit organizations.

Comparable Programs in Illinois

A review of the IBHE Degree Program Inventory and the Notice of Intent Website reveals that there are no similar undergraduate programs currently offered at any Illinois public or private institutions.

Projected Need

According to the State of Illinois Occupational Employment Projections (2010-2020), occupations related to this degree program are projected to have 4,644 annual job openings.

Relation to the Illinois Public Agenda

This program supports Goal 1 by providing a bachelor's degree for students who wish to work in adult or community education settings. Recent state policy changes regarding teacher certification have substantially reduced the number of undergraduates eligible to enroll in formal teacher certification programs and this program is an option for them. Students interested in receiving an education degree but desiring to work with adults in community education settings would be interested in this program.

This program supports Goal 2 by providing a major program of 60-69 semester hours (with a required minor) facilitating degree completion (120 hours) within four years (native students) and two years (transfer students). {Specific details can be found in the four year and transfer plans.} Courses are sequenced to ensure that all required courses can be taken in four consecutive semesters.

This program supports Goal 3 by developing educational skills that can be used in a number of educational settings. In a time when the need for lifelong learning is an increasing necessity, graduates of this program will possess the skills to provide learning services in a number of continuing education settings.

Finally, this program supports Goal 4 by producing graduates who can deliver learning services to support the economic needs and growth of the state; these services may be delivered in community agencies, not-for-profit organizations, government agencies, and private businesses. It is expected that graduates will be able to plan and deliver educational efforts that address identified personal, social, and career growth needs for a variety of individuals, groups, and organizations.

Staffing

This program will be administered by the Department of Secondary Education and Foundations (SED) where the current faculty will provide the majority of the program's staffing and other resources. Other staffing resources may come from other departments in CEPS as well as other colleges at EIU. One Unit A or B faculty member will need to be hired from existing or redeployed resources. (During the past two years, SED lost 1 Unit A and 4 Unit B faculty members through retirements or resignations. None of these faculty positions have been refilled.)

It is recommended that the Board of Trustees approve the proposal for the Adult and Community Education Undergraduate Degree.

2.) Sustainable Entrepreneurship through Education and Development (SEED) Center

Executive Summary for SEED

The primary focus of the Sustainable Entrepreneurship through Education and Development (SEED) Center at Eastern Illinois University is to foster collaboration among students, researchers, educators, and practicing entrepreneurs to promote, through integrative learning, an understanding of starting and managing a profitable business.

The SEED Center will serve as the interdisciplinary home for collaborative learning among multiple disciplines. The Center will also serve the minor in Entrepreneurship housed in the School of Business. The mission of the SEED Center will be accomplished by 1. integrating the intellectual capacities and resources of the university through an entrepreneurial focus, 2. coordinating with academic units to offer experiential learning and research opportunities for students and faculty with an entrepreneurial focus, 3. collaborating with the entrepreneurial community to provide experiential learning and research opportunities for students and faculty, 4. supporting academic units with curriculum development in the field of entrepreneurship, and 5. educating future entrepreneurial leaders to enhance economic development.

The Sustainable Entrepreneurship through Education and Development (SEED) Center can provide a rich teaching/learning environment to facilitate entrepreneurial education both in and out of the classroom through faculty-mentored research and experiential learning opportunities. Combining the intellectual capacities and resources of the University will allow for the facilitation of community collaboration and partnering with both internal and external stakeholders. By building a connectedness to the community, students and faculty can become involved in theory-to-practice experiences such as business plan competitions, and partnering with local businesses. The Center's emphasis on integrative learning will culminate in graduates with an ability to think critically, communicate clearly, and behave as responsible citizens and leaders.

In addition to championing integrative learning, the SEED Center will support economic development in East Central Illinois by supporting and enhancing priorities for local sustainability. The needs of EIU's students, as well as the economic needs of the state and region will be met through education and research.

The Center will be administered by a Director as well as by an advisory board comprised of faculty, administrators, and representatives from area businesses. The Director will oversee the operations of SEED as well as the services of the Business Solutions Center. Additionally, a SCORE counselor will provide business expertise and knowledge as an outreach service to early stage "startups" and established companies.

The proposal outlines performance measures for the Center's goals as well as quality assurance indicators and necessary resources. Initially, the Center will not require new faculty or new equipment. The core courses for the entrepreneurship minor as well as various electives have already been developed and are in place. Ultimately, a milestone for the Center would be to create a dedicated space for a student incubator/hatchery for the development of entrepreneurial projects and ideas to benefit the University and the community. Philanthropic external funding of $100,000 has been identified.

It is recommended that the Board of Trustees approve the proposal for the Sustainable Entrepreneurship through Education and Development (SEED) Center.

AROUND CAMPUS

EIU Launches its 2014 Self-Study. EIU launched its 2014 self-study on Aug. 28 in preparation of accreditation through the Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association of Schools and Colleges. During a meeting of more than 200 representatives of the campus and surrounding communities, the NCA Steering Committee previewed a video that describes the accreditation process. President Perry explained the importance of accreditation to the university and Provost Lord outlined ways representatives of our campus and surrounding communities can participate. (Go to <http://www.eiu.edu/nca2014/> to view video.)

Because accreditation is required for comprehensive participation as an institution of higher learning, it is among the university's most important activities and achievements. The accrediting agency evaluates the entire institution and requires the institution to undertake a self-study followed by an agency site visit. The accreditation process will culminate in a site visit scheduled for Oct. 20, 21 and 22, 2014.

EIU Notes Rise in U.S. News Rankings. Eastern saw a significant increase in its placement in the U.S. News and World Report college rankings to No. 7 among Midwest public master's institutions. "We're pleased that our rankings have increased and that because of U.S. News' change in methodology, that they are more focused on the quality of college education," said Blair Lord, provost and vice president for academic affairs. "We continually improve our programs, but not because we are overly focused on ratings. We want to stay focused on helping our prospective students find if they're a good fit for us and if we are a good fit for them."

"As Americans, we have a real fascination with contests and rankings and this report plays to that interest," Lord added. "But we hope in the end that prospective students consider their own talents and interests and pick a university based on the best fit for them – the place where they can thrive." (See <http://castle.eiu.edu/pubaff/viewstory.php?action=888> for more on the story.)

Honors College Moves. This past July, the Honors College moved from its old quarters in Booth House to a newly renovated suite on the second floor of Pemberton Hall South. On Sept. 11, the college held an open house, giving visitors the opportunity to see the renovations, meet Honors students, faculty and staff, and greet the new Honors dean, Richard England. A more formal ribbon-cutting ceremony/reception is scheduled to take place from 5 to 7 p.m. Friday, Oct. 18 (Homecoming weekend).

Finance Class Places Third in Investment Competition. Crystal Lin and members of her FIN 4220 class – "Applied Securities Analysis" – placed third in the Growth Category at the annual University of Dayton RISE (Redefining Investment Strategy Education) Conference held earlier this year. Business students get a dose of real-world investing pressure each year in preparation for the competition. The contest pits student portfolio managers -- some of whom are managing portions of their own universities' endowments -- against each other with the goal of honoring the year's best-performing student-managed funds in six categories: alternative, balanced, core, fixed, growth and value. The EIU class manages more than $100,000 for the EIU Foundation. (Portfolio values are as of Dec. 31, 2012.)

Cebrin Goodman Teen Institute Brings Campers to EIU Campus. The Cebrin Goodman Teen Institute brought more than 460 campers (grades 7-12) and 80 adult supervisors to the EIU campus for the first time in July. Sponsored by the Illinois Alcoholism and Drug Dependence Association, the annual event has previously been held on the campuses of other state universities or colleges. Able to provide the teen institute with a large central meeting facility, some larger area lecture sites and a series of technologically ready break-out rooms, Eastern was able to attract the event to its campus in 2013. The Cebrin Goodman Teen Institute is a national award-winning prevention program that emphasizes positive peer influence and helps youth (grades 7-12) and adults join together to prevent alcohol and other drug use. It is a comprehensive education and training program that promotes positive attitude to improve all areas of life.

More than 13,000 guests visit Eastern each summer to take part in various programs being offered. Other camps and events include (but are not limited to) the IHSA state track meets, the IHSA badminton championship, Smith Walbridge clinics, Premier Illinois Boys State and Illini Girls State.

WEIU-TV News Watch is a Six-time Emmy Award-winning Broadcast. The weekday news program is a six-time winner of a regional student Emmy award from Mid-America 2013 College and High School Television Student Awards for Excellence. Winners will be presented with a Student Pillar at the 37th Emmy Gala on Oct. 5 at the Renaissance Grand Hotel in St. Louis.

FACULTY/STAFF NEWS

Mulvaney Named 2013-14 Faculty Laureate. Michael Mulvaney helps his students explore the many directions available to them in life and provides the tools and equipment they'll need for the trip. It's not been too many years since he made the journey himself, and the memory remains fresh in his mind.

"I started at Decatur's Millikin University," he said, noting that he was a double-major in sports management and sociology and was a student-athlete on the track and field team. But, perhaps even more importantly, he gained knowledge via peer-to-peer interaction -- hearing and seeing his fellow students as they discussed their lives, experiences and contemporary, as well as historical, issues.

"I believe that knowledge is a critical piece of a student's education," Mulvaney said. "Talking aloud -- the sharing of ideas and thoughts -- is a part of the personal development that occurs as individuals prepare to take on their roles as responsible members of society." This will be a part of the message he'll be advocating as he serves as Eastern's 2013-2014 Faculty Laureate, an honor presented to him by the institution's Council on Academic Affairs. In addition to his duties as a full-time faculty member in the Department of Recreation Administration, Mulvaney will spend the coming year as the university's official spokesperson on the importance of a general/liberal education.
